Improperly addressed homes targeted

Homeowners put on notice

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

Didsbury residents whose homes don't have a number address on the front of them are being asked to get one—quick.

That's the message coming from town councillors as they prepare to vote on a bylaw that, if passed, could see fines of $75 issued to home owners in non-compliance.

And homes with improper numbers are in the same boat as those with no numbers at all.

The move is a result of emergency services experiencing difficulties in finding homes during emergency responses, a problem the Town said could mean the difference between life and death.

"It's a safety issue and it's very, very important that the emergency ambulance and fire can find an address very quickly," said CAO Roy Brown.

Brown wants residents to understand that the bylaw is not an attempt by administration to be high-handed, but a necessary step that will benefit both emergency workers and the public.

Nick Thain, director of Mountain View Regional Emergency Services (MVRES), agreed.

"Anything that cuts down a delay in a response to someone's address in the case of an emergency is beneficial to them and emergency services in reaching that address," he said.

Thain said the issue is becoming increasingly important as communities like Didsbury continue to grow.

"What we're finding in all of the municipalities that we serve is that with the growth and development, people are getting into houses before there's addresses on them, which can be a big issue," he said.

Council already passed first reading of the bylaw last week, but was weary of taking it to second and third readings before the public was properly notified because as soon as the bylaw is passed, it needs to be enforced.

And council wants to provide ample opportunity for residents to get numbers up before fines are imposed.

It is expected that council will vote unanimously for the bylaw at its next meeting Sept. 29.

If a resident receives a $75 fine and fails to remedy the problem, a second offense could carry a fine of up to $1,000 and three months in jail.

Mayor Dorothy Moore said that would be an ultimate penalty and she doesn't anticipate jail time to be handed out, but she does want the public to understand the importance of the issue.

"In one case there were no numbers in the entire cul-de-sac. What do (emergency workers) do, knock on every door?" she said.

"I think this is something that everybody wants to see happen because it is a safety issue."

Moore is also urging homeowners who have numbers on their houses to make sure they are the right ones.

"I think sometimes people just figured it out for themselves and didn't really check," she said, adding that she herself has a building that was labeled with two numbers, but only held one business. There are now two businesses in that building, so she is in compliance with the proposed bylaw, but said many people aren't.

Residents who are unsure of whether or not they have the proper number on their house can call the town office at 335-3301 to double check.

The public is only responsible for house numbers. It is the town's responsibility to ensure that all street signage is properly displayed.

Jodi Styner/Didsbury Review

Council will vote on a bylaw later this month that proposes fines for homeowners whose houses aren't properly addressed. Under the bylaw a street number, like the one shown above, would not necessary but a house number would.

Kim McEwing, pictured here with her 17-year-old son, is recovering in hospital after suffering a stroke that has left the left side of her body paralyzed. Kim's friends and family are thankful for the way the community has come together to help her.

Community rallies for stroke victim

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

Whether she's done your nails, decorated you with a tattoo, groomed your dog, sold you a dog, or played softball with you, chances are you know Kim McEwing.

And judging by the support she's received from the community, it seems you care a lot about her too.

Nearly $7,000 was raised through a silent auction at Our Rose Lounge recently to be put toward medical expenses and other bills Kim has incurred since suffering a sudden stroke.

"It's going to go to help her so she doesn't lose her house, so that when she gets out of the hospital she's got a place to live," said friend Shyla Nickerson.

"We can't let her lose her house."

Nickerson, along with a small group of family and friends, scrambled to organize the event in a short time, but it was a success.

"It was very quickly organized, but it was overwhelming the support we got," she said.

Local businesses donated over 40 items for the auction and Our Rose Lounge gave a large portion of their drink sales to the cause as well.

"It's really nice to see the community pull together the way it did for her," said Nickerson.

"I want to thank everyone for their auction donations, for their support, for coming out."

When Kim found out how the community had rallied for her, she was overwhelmed.

"She cried," said Nickerson.

"She cries a lot, when she's happy, when she's really happy. It's hard for her to get ahead of her emotions right now."

Kim is a 44-year-old mother of two. Her 17-year-old son is currently taking care of her dogs and her house and her 22-year-old daughter is helping out as much as she can.

Kim's own mom is battling cancer right now, so it's been a very emotional time for the entire family.

And the road to recovery is a long one.

Kim's left side is paralyzed, and her speech and hearing have been severely affected.

She is currently biding her time at the Didsbury hospital while she awaits a rehabilitation bed in Calgary.

"The longer she waits for a bed in rehab, the longer it will take in rehab," said Nickerson who added that doctors have not been able to give an estimate for how long the wait will be.

"They just say they're trying."

Kim suffered the stroke in a hotel elevator on her way back from a houseboating trip in B.C.

She was hospitalized in Kamloops before Nickerson and three other friends drove out in a motorhome to bring her back to Didsbury where she's lived for 27 years.

Once Kim's recovery is complete, her friends will work on remodeling her home so that it is wheelchair or walker compatible, depending on what's required.

The cost of remodeling will be expensive, so the next fundraiser is already being planned.

Nancy McTavish said she couldn't afford to help out with the silent auction, but she wanted to do something.

So she's working on a garage sale, with all the proceeds going to Kim, and her kids are trying to organize a bottle drive to do their part as well.

"It's a lot of work, but it's well worth it," said Nickerson.

HIV wake up call

The international AIDS conference held in Toronto last week was supposed to serve as an eye-opener, to create awareness that AIDS is not a disease that is cordoned off in Sub-Saharan Africa, but a pandemic that stretches the world over, including right here at home.

It's easy to dismiss AIDS as a foreign concept in a foreign land. Ignoring it is certainly easier than letting it scare the heck out of us, right?

But it's an issue that deserves more than distant attention - a passive one-dollar-a-day-donation-will-save-a-life kind of reaction. It exists in our cozy neighbourhoods and its time we woke up to that fact.

If you're not you're safe here in Canada, just as long as you're not a gay heroine addict, think again.

Case in point is my friend Rob, a straight, drug-free man who was in his 20s when he contracted HIV, and whose family lives here in rural Central Alberta.

Rob was partying with friends in a Montreal bar when he made the biggest mistake of his life and took a stranger home at the end of the night.

Turns out she was infected with HIV.

By the time Rob found out, he had already dated someone else, who had since married another man.

The infection could easily have continued down the line, but luckily, she tested free and clear.

Rob wasn't so lucky.

He died last year at the age of 38.

It was a cold December day when Rob was diagnosed. He left the doctors office and walked calmly through the snowflakes, got into his little Honda, gripped his hands on the steering wheel and mapped his course, straight into a big oak tree at the end of the street.

But something stopped him. All he could think about was how devastated his mother would be. He knew she'd be able to live with an HIV-positive son, but not a dead one.

So he drove home and got drunk, and when he sobered up weeks later, he made the call he'd been dreading to inform his ex-girlfriend that she needed to be tested. Merry Christmas.

After a long spell of depression and drowning his problems in a bottle of Captain Morgan's, Rob decided to fight back.

In the years before he passed away, even when he was sick, Rob used his experience to educate and help people.

He offered support to newly diagnosed people through AIDS Calgary, and spoke at least once a week to healthcare employees and students, working to break down the stigmas surrounding HIV and AIDS.

That's how I first met Rob. He spoke to my broadcast journalism class, and when he made eye contact, I saw passion and determination just bursting inside of him.

A year later I tracked him down and asked if he would be my subject for a photo assignment.

For two months, I followed Rob around, snapping photos of anything and everything.

I watched him at work, where he never stood still.

I went to his home where he proudly showed me pictures of his mom, sisters and nieces, and listened as he told me the only thing that really made him sad was knowing he would never have kids of his own.

I was right there beside him when every news station in Calgary had a camera in his face after he won the Roger LeBlanc spirit award for his tireless volunteerism.

After all that time, what I ended up with was a bunch of poorly composed photos that were supposed to depict a day in the life of someone living with HIV.

Clearly my photo skills needed some work, but in the end, I walked away with much more than that.

I had taken on a project far out of my scope of skill and comprehension and learned more than I ever could have imagined, not only about photography, but about HIV and about life.

And I made a new friend whose zest for life made people so happy just to be in his presence, and who incidentally made the best coffee I've ever tasted.

For me, the international AIDS conference served as a sort of memorial to remember Rob.

I would love to be able to chat with Rob over a cup of coffee again.

But I would love even more if his one wish could be granted - that his message, and that of the conference organizers in Toronto - not fall on deaf ears.

AIDS is here, it's time to pay attention.

AT THE KITCHEN TABLE

Our Hummingbird feeder goes up on May 15. That's probably a little early because May 19 is the usual arrival time but they have come as early as the 14th and when that happens they buzz the space where the feeder should be and I feel terrible that my favorite guests have arrived and there is no food on the table.

They are with us from then until about August 26 when they have a final feeding frenzy and leave for the Southern States and Central America. A very long flight for a creature that's just over three inches long and weighs less than your little finger.

The Hummingbirds that stay with us for the summer are Ruby-throated.

Once in a while we have Rufous and once we had an Anna's but the Ruby-throated are the ones that we can depend on. It was not always this way. We had a feeder up for years and only saw the occasional tourist-type hummer, but beginning in 1984 a pair of hummers began coming on a regular basis and ever since then, they and what I assume are their descendants, have never missed a season. The day the first hummer comes to the feeder is cause for celebration, official end of the miserable winter, and the beginning of summer.

The day the feeder remains untouched is a day of sorrow, the end of summer, and cause for a deep feeling of gloom. Hummingbirds are important to us and we enjoy them tremendously. The feeder is cleaned and filled on a regular basis and the nectar is 1 cup of boiled water to a cup of sugar. No colour, no additives and I am very careful about using insecticides on my flowers because I don't want to poison the hummers.

Yesterday I came home from town and drove into the garage. When my husband came over to help unload the groceries he heard a sound coming from the stairwell that leads into the basement. He looked over the railing and saw, in the gloom, a tiny bit of life on the floor of the stairwell and fluttering against the basement door. He picked up, and handed to me, an exhausted and almost lifeless hummingbird. I cradled her in my hand and her tiny head and long thin bill stuck out between my thumb and forefinger. Her black eyes were smaller than the head of a pin, but seemed bright and I took that as a good sign. The colouring showed that this was a female and because it was really small I assume it was a young one. Green iridescent feathers overlapped all down her head and back, there was black from her chin under her eye to her ear, her sides were paler green, rest of her under parts white. The centre tail feathers were green, outer ones dark and the whole tail slightly forked. Her wings were mostly dark grey to black and unbelievably delicate.

Extended they were translucent. The toes on her tiny feet were about the diameter of horse hair. She lay in my hand without struggling and did not seem to be afraid, but when I turned her over to see if there were signs of an injury she opened her bill and made a couple of sharp little squawks.

It was when I turned her over that I saw that her feet were all stuck together with webbing and some type of seeds. I carefully pulled the sticky gunk off her feet and it came away quite cleanly, then I noticed that there was webbing in her wings so one at a time, and very gently, I extended her wings and picked the webbing off of them. A long sticky piece clung to her throat as well.

Now that she was clean we wanted to feed her. I held her to the feeder, but couldn't tell if she was taking on any nourishment so Ralph mixed a bit of sugar water and we held her bill to a spoonful of the mix.

Immediately her minute tongue flicked out of her long bill and we could see it in the nectar. Her tongue was much smaller than a human hair and seemed to kind of vibrate in the water.

When she was no longer interested in food we set her outside on the lid of a plastic container and watched hopefully for signs of recovery.

She lay quietly, leaning forward. Hummingbirds do not stand or walk, they only perch or fly because their feet are too far back on their bodies to maintain balance while walking. After a few minutes, during which time her tail fluttered a bit, she just extended her wings and zoomed off. We were totally delighted.

I wish there were some way that we could have marked her, wouldn't it be great to know that she made it back next May? And meanwhile think of the story she has to tell her family.

Carstairs business used as backdrop for TV commercial

BY SHAWNE MOHL
for the Didsbury Review

A little piece of Carstairs will be thrown into the spotlight and viewed by millions of people across Western Canada.

Last week 10th Ave. was converted into what looked like a Hollywood set, as camera crews moved in to film a commercial for the Western Canadian Lotteries.

Joe Media – the Calgary-based production company in charge of putting production – traveled to more than 50 locations across Alberta looking for the perfect spot to film.

When they stumbled across Henry's Food Store in Carstairs last Sunday, it was a match made in heaven.

The older brick building, according to officials from Joe Media, was exactly what they were looking for and within two days they had their crews, actors, and cameras on scene.

"We liked it because it felt western," said Brent Kawchuk, Vice President and Executive Producer of Joe Media.

"We also wanted it to have a unique look that avoided mimicking any large franchises."

The commercial is a humorous promotion of the Western Canadian Lotteries, featuring a group of cheerleaders cheering for winner, after winner, after winner.

It plays on the idea that there are so many winners across Western Canada, that it's exhausting to cheer for them all.

Kawchuk said he was pleased with the great cooperation they received from both Town of Carstairs officials as well as the owner of Henry's Foods Jim Alghabari.

When Alghabari was approached to see if they could come do a commercial outside of his store, he was more than willing. "I really liked the idea," he said, adding that it's exciting for him to see his business be included in a commercial that so many people will view.

The cost of the commercial isn't being released, but crews were in Carstairs filming from 7 a.m. until about 6 p.m. – with numerous trucks, people, and cameras setting up – portraying it to be a very costly venture.

Joe Media has filmed commercials for Sport Chek, Ford, Toyota, Calgary Stampede, AADAC, and more.

The company also does documentaries, concert and performance films, and a show called Fixing Dinner which airs on Food Network Canada.

This Western Canadian Lotteries commercial is set to air September 1.

Jodi Styner/Didsbury Review

NOT "JEST" MUSIC – Tara Hazelton, lead singer of Jeff Healey's band The Jazz Wizards, was a crowd pleaser Saturday at the first annual Mountain View Music Festival, hosted by Didsbury's own Polyesters. This first event started out small, in Jason Valleau's backyard in Carstairs, but it turned out to be a big hit drawing enough audience members to easily fill the large yard. Next year Jason and Sheldon want to hold the concert on a larger scale in the center of town and continue to grow year by year.

PONDERINGS OF THE HEART

A rainy day

BY MARGARET FRADLEY
for the Didsbury Review

We've all heard it said many times that it is important to save for a rainy day.

When suddenly an unexpected need arises, a special opportunity presents itself or whatever other situation comes along, we need to be able to draw on those savings for our so called 'rainy day'.

As I pondered these thoughts, I began to think of how important it is for us to have resources (savings for our rainy day) when we come up with unexpected emotional needs, times of sorrow, stress, sickness, job losses. At these times we also need resources to draw on that will encourage us, carry us through.

Years ago, as I took a Bible study course, it was necessary to learn a number of scripture passages, which at the time I found very difficult, but worked my way through. Now I discover that we can draw on just these promises, verses that sustain us, lift us up, and keep us focused on what is good, positive and strengthening.

So, as necessary as it is to have savings for rainy days to draw upon, we need even more to have a resource to draw upon in special times of need, when we become weary, perhaps find ourselves on overload, for a season, when we need a time to regroup, a time to be "still and know" that we have a God who is our strength, our help, and who has promised to uphold us with His powerful hand.

The one who has also promised He will never leave us or forsake us.

Another great fair weekend!

The Didsbury Agricultural Society outdid itself again this year! The Thunder on the Valley fireworks display was second to none, the Didsbury Elks/Royal Purple Parade was one of the best we've ever seen, and the Chamber of Commerce's pancake breakfast on Sunday morning saw another great turnout.

We're not entirely sure how many pancakes 24 kgs of pancake flour makes, but well over 1,000 sausages were devoured by the crowd of about 300. And coffee!! Just exactly how much coffee six kgs makes, or how many glasses of orange juice you get out of 33 liters ... again, we're not sure, but we sure know that no one left the train station hungry!

Volunteers included the gang from ATB Financial: Gerlinde Lea, Sarah Willet, Heather McDonald, and Jan Woolnough; Ken McClain, Wendy & Roger Barker, and several from the Chamber Council itself - what a grand group of volunteers. They kept the Lions grill working steadily for over two hours!

Special thanks go to the sponsors of the breakfast: James Carpenter's CIR Realty team of Marilyn Moncur and Gerry Tonn, Greg Poirier of Didsbury AG Foods, and Ron Boyko from Custom Touch Homes. Without this support from the business community, events like the pancake breakfast just wouldn't happen.

For more on the Chamber of Commerce, please check out the website at www.didsburychamber.ca or call 335-3265.

A SIGN OF THINGS TO COME - A new Didsbury Chamber of Commerce sign was unveiled outside the train station Sunday following the chamber's pancake breakfast.

OBITUARIES

MURIEL ELEANOR (BURKE) SOMERS

entered her heavenly home on Sunday, August 13, 2006. She was born on July 24, 1913 to Albert and Anna Burke at her grandparents, Abraham and Susan Otto's farmhouse in rural Alberta, Sedalia, Alberta. After leaving school upon completion of Grade 8, Muriel returned to her birthplace and worked for her grandmother Otto preparing many meals for grain threshing crews. While there she met her husband Ronald who worked on the crews. Muriel and Ronald were married June 21, 1934. They set up house on a rented farm close to her grandparents' and Ronald's parents' homestead. Several years later they purchased a farm, where the family grew up. Muriel worked hard on the farm and loved to work alongside Ronald. Muriel accepted the Lord Jesus as her personal Saviour at age 8 and she dedicated her life to God, to her family and her church. Muriel leaves behind her family: son, Leroy (Clara), two daughters, Heather (Wallace) Faas, and Ruth; grandchildren, Emily (Steve), Arlene (Paul), Colin (Jamie), David (Kandace), Ken, and Greg (Jody); Brent (Tamara), Brenda (Chris) and Bonnie (Marshall); great-grandchildren, Silas, Luke, Morgan, Trey, Tia, Tyson, Trinity, Jason, Savanna, and Angel. Two sisters, Faye and Clarice, sister-in-law Mae, three cousins, many nieces and nephews. Muriel was predeceased by her husband, Ronald, infant son Hamilton, and daughter Doreen. Our thanks to Dr. Brodie for his care during her surgeries. A special Thank You to Eden Care Home where Mom resided for 4 1/2 years. We as a family will be ever grateful to the Special Care Aides who treated Mother like their Mom. A memorial service was held at the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church, Hwy. 582 & 20 Avenue, Didsbury on Tuesday, August 22, 2006, 2 p.m. Burial at West Zion Mennonite Cemetery. Flowers are gratefully declined. Should friends so desire, donations can be made in memory of Muriel to Global Recordings Network Canada, #6, 120 Lancing Drive, Hamilton, Ontario, L8W 3A1.

HAPPY BELATED BIRTHDAY TO Greg Frizzell from your friend in Leduc. 34

THANK YOU

In loving memory of
who passed away August 25, 2005

God looked around His garden, And found an empty space. He then looked down upon this Earth and saw your tired face. He put His arms around you And lifted you to rest, God's garden must be beautiful, He only takes the best. He knew that you were suffering, He knew you were in pain, He knew you might never get well Upon this earth again.	He saw the road was getting rough, And the hills were hard to climb, So he closed your weary eyelids, And whispered "Peace be thine." It broke our hearts to lose you, But you never went alone, For part of us went with you, The day God called you Home. Always remembered & sadly missed by Isabelle

who passed away August 25, 2005

In a quiet graveyard,
Where the gentle breezes blow,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
Whom we lost 1 year ago.
May the winds of love blow gently,
And whisper so you can hear
That we will always love and miss you
And wish that you were here.
